Karbi Anglong

Suren Engti, a rice cultivator of Monsing Rongchekon village is an aspiring farmer who has become a source of inspiration for other farmers in his region. Installing Solar Tube well under PMKSY scheme in his farm land, Arbaindra started cultivating rice in 12 bighas land which turned out fruitful as it increased his crop yield. He is not only happy with the yield and profit but is also thankful to the government for the innovative scheme launched for their welfare.

Earlier, he had to use a water pump on rent to irrigate his farm. Not only this, he had to pump water from his neighbour's pond. It made his cultivation very complex and had to depend on others for farming. But the PMKSY scheme solved his problem completely. Now he can easily irrigate his field for cultivation. He is very happy with the scheme and is now engaged in cultivating a variety of crops and vegetables.

"As you sow, so shall you reap"

This is the story of Siva Ram Engti. A resident of Bura Killing village, Karbi Anglong, Assam, Siva Ram's story goes far beyond his hard work and dedication towards his profession. Being from a remote area, Siva Ram never hesitated to learn new and modern techniques of farming. Barriers never kept him aside. His grit, determination and his contribution towards farming earned him a good name in his region.

The implementation of PMKSY scheme in his village made him even more successful. Installation of electrical tube well increased his crop yield and did not only doubled but tripled his income. Cultivating rice in 18 bighas land his production rose to 3000 kg. He could produce only 1000 kg of rice earlier before the implementation of PMKSY scheme.
